Lincoln Estates Man Killed In Accident

Prominent New Lenox Citizen Passes Away

New Lenox was grieved last Thursday evening when they learned of the death of one of their most prominent citizens, Mr. Harry Storm who passed away in Silver Cross hospital in Joliet that evening, following a recent operation, from which he did not rally.

Mr. Storm, who was ailing for some time was not disposed enough to prevent him from taking his usual active part in his daily routine.

He was born in Marley August 9, 1874, the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Storm, the latter being pioneers in this section. On January 22, 1896 he was united in marriage with Miss Jennie Gillett, in the home of her parents, where they made their home and resided there the rest of his life. Mr. and Mrs. Storm celebrated their Golden Wedding anniversary last January. The parents of Mrs. Storm, Mr. and Mrs. Abner Gillett were the founders of New Lenox township.

Mr. Storm served for more than four decades as school director in the township, and spent much of his time directing and supervising the work when the new village school was built several years ago. When the New Lenox State Bank was organized in 1927 he was chosen vice president, which office he held continually to the time of his death. He was president of the New Lenox Grain Co., and served many years as a member of the board of directors, and also vice president.

Mr. Storm was also active in the work of the Pure Milk Association and the Will County Farm Bureau. He was an outstanding cattle feeder in the county when he was in the dairy business having farmed all his life.

Mr. Storm was of a kindly disposition and had a keen mind of the executive type. A friendly neighbor always willing to lend a helping hand, and a loving husband and father.

Surviving are his wife; daughter, Mrs. Irving Jensen, three grand children and one great grand child.

Funeral services were held in the Sonntag Funeral home in Joliet Saturday morning with the pastor of the New Lenox Methodist church, Rev. Ralph Miller, officiating.

Burial was made in Maplewood cemetery in New Lenox.

To Vote On Merger Of Lincoln Estate Schools

The School problem in Lincoln Estates has been one of vital interest for several years. Before the establishing of the community of Lincoln Estates, there was one rural school, 156, and after the rapid growth of the new community, the school was overcrowded and another school was built, called the Ann Rutledge, Dist. 156A.

The Ann Rutledge, which is on the south side of Lincoln Highway soon became over crowded and an addition was added to it and new furnishings and repairs to the older part. There are about 50 pupils attending this school now, with a regular teacher, Mrs. Hilda Walker and a part time teacher, Mrs. Isabell Davidson.

Dist. 156 school, north of the highway with about 15 pupils needs repairs to the building and had one teacher who has resigned.

At a joint meeting of the two school boards held in the Ann Rutledge school Tuesday evening it was agreed that the best way to solve the problem was to consolidate the two districts. That will be decided by an election to be held Saturday July 27 from 12 noon to 7 p.m. in both schools.

Sentiment among the people give about 95 percent for consolidation. There is farming area in the 156 district and not any farms in the 156A district. There has been rumors making the rounds that consolidation will cost $50,000 which the board members say is not true. There will be absolutely no increase in taxes for anyone in either area, as the Ann Rutledge school, which would be the one that would be used in case of consolidation, has already completed their addition and repairs, with no expense to the incoming district.

It seems that the logical thing to do is to consolidate for the good of the children in that area. It is better to have one good school than two not quite up to par. Crossing the highway is no objection as school children most everywhere these days, cross some high way or busy thoroughfare every school day.

District 156A has re-engaged Mrs. Walker and also Mrs. Davidson as full time teachers.

Fatally Injured As Car Overturns

Residents of Lincoln Estates were grievously shocked Monday morning when they heard of the death of one of their citizens and returned Service man, Wilfred Niedringhaus.

Wilfred had been attending the wedding dance of his cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Jack McCarthy in Tinley Park Sunday evening. He left there shortly after 2 A.M. for his home, in Lincoln Estates, a small community two miles east of the village of Frankfort.

About 2:30 a passing motorist saw the upset car and noticed a body lying nearby. He notified the state police who at once went to the scene of the accident which was on Oak Park Avenue about a mile south of 183rd.

There they found the car turned over on the shoulder of the road with young Niedringhaus lying about three feet from it nearer the road. The body was removed to the Hirsch Funeral Home in Chicago Heights. The inquest which was held Monday gave the decision of a heart attack, which caused him to lose control of his car which thus ran off the road. His neck was broken.

Wilfred was born in Chicago August 2, 1921 the son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Niedringhaus and moved to Lincoln Estates with his parents in 1929. He was an only child. He entered the armed forces in November 1942 and served overseas for many months and received his honorable discharge in August 1945. He has been employed as a painter by Mr. L. H. Kellogg in Mokena.

Beside his parents he is survived by a host of friends.

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at the Hirsch Funeral home in Chicago Heights with Rev. Rudolf Malek, of Chicago, former pastor of the Frankfort Methodist church officiating. The Stone City Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars of Joliet, of which the deceased was a member, was in charge of the services. Pall bearers were his buddies: Max Williams, Don Williams, Robert Anderson, Walter Madison, John DeHaan and a neighbor friend Henry Sluiter. Burial was made in Pleasant Hill cemetery at Frankfort.

Gas Service Limited To Certain New Customers

To protect the supply of gas to existing consumers next winter, the Illinois commerce commission today granted authority to the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois to limit gas sales to new industrial, commercial and residential house heating customers.

The order is similar to that given last week to the Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company curtailing gas sales to certain types of new customers in Chicago. Public Service company, which receives the bulk of its gas supply thru the Peoples company, serves gas in 112 suburban and outlying communities in northern Illinois.

The curtailment order against new gas loads was necessitated by rising demands for gas coupled with war born delays in expansion of the pipeline bringing natural gas from the Texas Panhandle to the Chicago area.

Anticipating the need for additional gas supplies, the natural gas pipeline company petitioned the federal power commission in July, 1945 for authority to parallel its existing twenty four inch main from Texas. The FPC authorized the work two months ago, but inability of the pipeline company to obtain deliveries on the steel pipe required will delay completion until the spring or summer of 1947.

Gas demands of the area on the coldest days next winter are now estimated to require approximately the total capacity of the pipeline plus full production from all gas manufacturing plants. The commission's order authorizes the company to:

1. Refuse gas service to any new industrial gas customer who can reasonably use any fuel other than gas or whose use of gas for processing purposes will exceed 4,000 therms per month, or to any existing industrial consumer to the extent that such customer's use of gas will, by reason of the installation of gas burning equipment not installed on July 16, exceed 4,000 therms per month.
2. Curtail supplies to large industrial and commercial customers in the event of gas shortages next winter.
3. Limit gas service for house heating to premises heated with gas last winter or in which gas space heating equipment was installed or in process of installation by July 16; or new homes completed or under construction by July 16 in which gas heat has been installed or specified.

The order will continue in effect until April 30, 1947. With completion of the additional pipeline capacity next year, the Public Service company expects to be able to meet all demands for gas in the winter of 1947-48, a company spokesman said.

THEY STRUT . . . Not only the turkeys, but the people of Timberville, Va., where from 175,000 to 200,000 marketable turkeys are grown every year, bringing additional revenue to many farm families.

IN THESE UNITED STATES:

Virginia Town Proves Turkey Flocks Can Bring Prosperity

By E. L. KIRKPATRICK
WNU Features.

Picture 175,000 to 200,000 turkeys strutting around a town of less than 400 people. That's what happens at Timberville, Va., in Rockingham county, one of the outstanding turkey and broiler producing areas of the state.

"Last year we counted that many marketable turkeys within a five-mile radius of Timberville," says Sam Cox, district county agent.

This enterprise has been developed largely to supplement the raising of broilers which was started with a workable contract plan of local and nearby hatcheries and feed companies during the depression. Through this plan, baby chicks, young turkeys and poultry feed are provided on a share-the-profits-above-cost basis. The plan put chickens and turkeys through the valleys and up the mountains, enabling many farm families, once on relief, to clear $1,000 a year.

The turkey and broiler enterprises are helped materially by Mutual Cold Storage and the Rockingham Poultry Marketing Co-op, both locally owned and locally operated organizations. The poultry marketing group processes as much as $6,000 worth of produce per year. In a heavy run, 6,000 turkeys or 4,000 broilers are picked, cleaned, cut up and frozen in a day. The plant employs more than 200 local workers with a payroll of $250,000 a year.

Timberville also has a canning factory that handles 60,000 bushels of peaches and 300,000 bushels of apples during a good fruit year. Likewise, it would be unfair to ignore Timberville's 100 to 500 carloads of fresh peaches annually, which go out by rail. Freight revenues on outgoing produce was more than $30,000 during a single busy month in 1944, which did not include loads of fruit that went out by truck.

Tall tales about Timberville!—Nevertheless true. And these things "didn't just happen," Mr. Cox concludes. "Take that poultry processing plant—it was built on faith. There was only $50 on hand when operations started in 1940. Farmers saw their folly of flooding the markets and letting things pile up as surpluses. They realized that processing could be done where the produce is grown. This avoids bottlenecks, makes sure that hungry people will be fed, helps the farmer make a decent living and in this instance enables them to talk turkey on the farm and away from home."

North Dakota Man Traps 200 Snakes From Single Den

CHAMBERLAIN, S. D.—Although Bryan Menzie of the soil conservation office is not particularly fond of rattlesnakes, he carries pictures of them around with him. Also, he likes to tell of how he captured more than 200 of them in one den on the Bill Stanton ranch, seven miles north of Chamberlain.

Jackly, who is a rattlesnake authority, designed two traps which were built by Bruce Campbell and Merle Thompson. The snake traps were set and the catch in them totaled more than 100 rattlers in recent weeks. Last fall over 125 rattlers were taken from the same den. It is the picture of these well-filled traps that Menzie carries around to show his friends.

Paul Bunyan Plow Makes Furrows 6 Feet Deep, 3 Wide

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.—California now boasts of the largest plow in the world, a Paul Bunyan model if there ever was one. It plows a furrow three feet wide and six feet deep and requires four heavy duty tractors to pull it. It turns over three-quarters of an acre every hour.

The reason for such a plow is that much good land in the San Luis Rey valley was covered by sand during a flood in 1916. The gigantic plow was built to dig deep into the ground and turn up the good soil and bury the sand. The fertility of the land is thus restored and ready for farming.

The cost of bringing the rich soil to the surface is from $50 to $100 an acre.

House Cost $1,700 In 1903; Sold for $5,000 in 1946

ORD, NEB.—Mrs. Mary Hill, now a resident of Ogallala, Neb., returned here recently to sell her former home which she and her late husband built in 1903 at a cost of $1,700.

She had no difficulty in finding a buyer for the house she lived in for 41 years. She sold the property for $5,000.

Stolen Automobiles

COLUMBIA, S. C.—If you are going to have your car stolen this is the safest town in the United States for the job. Columbia had the highest recovery rate, 90 per cent, of stolen automobiles in the nation during 1945. The national average shown was 35 per cent recovery.

Here's High School That Teaches Fishing

DOVER, N. H.—There's more to fishing than a pole, a hook and a worm, says Bernie Smith, local high school teacher, who is coach of the school's fishing squad. Smith believes that fishing some day may be an interscholastic sport with boys competing in teams for the best catches.

First, Smith started taking a few students on trips to nearby lakes. Gradually, the trips became so popular that fishing was instituted as a bona fide sport—making Dover perhaps the only city whose high school actually teaches and features angling.

The fishing squad trains indoors part of the time, making fancy baits, tying flies, casting to hit the target—an old rubber tire—and learning the theory of fishing.

Eventually, Smith envisions fishing clubs at every school, with annual competitions in fly-tying, fancy castings and just plain fishing.

THIS sporting life may be checked, dizzy and dumb, but it is never wholly dull. One never can tell from what direction the harpoon will be thrown.

Here is a double example. A few weeks ago the Louis-Conn party was to be the season's greatest thriller. At that time the Phillies were the joke of the sporting world. They had been tagged as the eternal occupants of baseball's doghouse. They were supposed to be imbedded in the cement of the cellar.

Grantland Rice

All this sounded reasonable enough as we looked over the chart. Then, with little warning, a cloud no larger than a man's hand or thumb worked into a western twister, while the Louis-Conn fight broke all records as a monumental flop—an all-time record.

About the same time, the lowly Phillies began their upsurge. Within two weeks they stole the glory of baseball. They became more talked about than the Red Sox or the Yankees, than the Dodgers or the Cardinals. They have made the Louis-Conn dull merry-go-round look like a taffy-pulling exhibition. The Phillies have emerged from the grottoes and the underground into the open. They finally see the light of the sun again. They can see the summer dawn and feel the rain.

Challengers Now

Through the combined efforts of owner Bob Carpenter, general manager Herb Pennock and manager Ben Chapman, one of the most liberal and one of the ablest combinations in baseball, the Phillies no longer are baseball's doormat. They no longer belong to the tribe of "God's green footstools." At last they are a real baseball team.

For several weeks now the Phillies have been playing the best ball in the National league. This may be no high tribute, but it is an amazing tribute to a team that has defended the cellar with record-breaking stubbornness for a long time. It should go as a high tribute to Messrs. Carpenter, Pennock and Chapman, who have combined to turn out the best job in baseball for 1946.

The Phillies of 1946 have carried us back to the Boston Braves of 1914. That happens to be some 32 years ago. Around this date the Braves were in last place. George Stallings, the fiery Braves manager from Georgia, was wearing out a suit a week, moving up and down the bench. There have been many hard-losing managers in baseball—most of them are—but Stallings holds the record.

Then, around the first of July, the Braves began their move from the bottom.

They had Rabbit Maranville at short and Johnny Evers at second. Great field—smart brain—big heart—no hit. They had Hank Gowdy, the old Sarge, back of the bat. But, above all, they had three great pitchers—Dick Rudolph, George Tyler and Bill James. Day after day, game after game, we saw these three pitchers in the box score—Rudolph, Tyler and James.

This trio proved to us that three pitchers, working every third or fourth day, are all a ball club needs. Working that often a pitcher gets control and confidence. I'm not referring to the sore-arm boys, to the once-a-week pitchers of the modern era, where it takes three or four pitchers to finish a ball game. Rudolph, Tyler and James started and finished their own games, working at least twice a week. They were not pampered as the modern pitchers are, barring such men as Feller, Newhouse and a few others.

From Bottom to Top

So the Braves moved from 8th to 7th place, then to 6th. They moved from 6th into the first division, then headed for the top. They made the top—and they didn't need eight or ten pitchers to carry them along. They needed only three—Rudolph, Tyler and James.

The light-hitting overlooked Braves only murdered the Athletics in four straight games. They outplayed and outgamed and outpitched and outthrew one of Connie Mack's greatest teams. Hank Gowdy hit over .500 in that series. But the main answer again was Rudolph, Tyler and James, who had been seasoned under fire for over three months, who had been worked often enough to know their trade.

Any pitcher who can't start and finish over 20 games, who can't work in over 300 innings—or 350 innings—isn't much of a pitcher. What baseball needs today is a combination of Rudolph, Tyler and James, who can handle a three months' schedule practically unaided. Modern pitchers need far more work than they are getting. No set of arms can be that fragile, that futile, that weak.

If Chapman only had another Rudolph, Tyler and James he would breeze through this 1946 pennant race. It wouldn't even be a contest.

Get New Tire Protection at One-half Price at Firestone

SUMMER months can be dangerous months if your tires are not in first class condition.

You can eliminate this hazard and get new tire protection at half price by having your tires repaired and recapped at your Firestone Dealer Store or Firestone Store.

Household Hints

When unmolding gelatin desserts dip mold into bowl of warm water deep enough so that it comes up to rim of mold. This must be done quickly as gelatin is likely to liquefy.

Try using a potato masher to cream butter and sugar for a cake. The wooden kind is especially good for this purpose.

In making coffee, tea or chocolate to be served iced, double the strength to allow for the ice used in cooling.

Relax in your bath. Instead of making it a speedy cleansing, take 15 minutes for your ablutions. Scrub the body with a good soap, rinse, and dry body briskly with a towel.

Civil Air Patrol, Squadron 613-3
by Sandy King

"Heavens to Betsy"—The "heavens" came quick to Betsy Becker, a 17 year old who soloed a Cub at Rubinkam Airport after only 5 hours of dual instruction. Betsy came to Rubinkam on a Monday for her first ride. The following Sunday, July 7th, Betsy was alone in the plane, guiding it high above the earth. In the fall, she's going to the University of Illinois to study medicine and has thought of using a plane to make emergency visits to all her future patients. Congrats to Betsy and to her instructor, "Bud" Porter.

Local Pilot in Air Races. At Rubinkam Airport a P51 Mustang Fighter Plane is being groomed to enter the Thompson Trophy Race at Cleveland over the Labor Day holidays. Last Saturday, Bruce Raymond, half owner of the "51" was beginning the job of streamlining the ship, stripping it of everything possible, so it will give every bit of speed. Bruce, a former pilot of the RAF and ATC, hopes to fly the ship in the National Air Races, but so does his partner. A flip of the coin may decide who will be "kicking the controls" as the ship reaches for the 400 miles per hour Bruce hopes it will do. We'll all be following your trail to fame, Bruce, and rooting for you!

Scoop Up! This column "scooped" Kup's column in the Chicago Times newspaper by over 6 months. On July 11, 1946 Kup's column stated that "the Wolverine and Sable Aircraft Carriers might be easily converted into housing units to accommodate U. of I. students attending classes at Navy Pier". Away back on January 24, 1946 this column read: "Housing Solved. Ship ahoy! The two aircraft carriers Wolverine and Sable stationed on Lake Michigan are for sale! If just a mere six or seven hundred of you folks get together and pool your cash, could be you'd be able to have one of the most unusual apartment buildings in the world! So anchors away! Don't feel sunk about housing conditions, send your bid to the War Shipping Administration." In other words, keep up with Sandy King, hep-hep.

Contrast in Horse Power. Recently well known Chicagoans flew 2,000 miles by plane in a day in order to ride 104 miles by horseback in a week. William Cline, Charles Hunter, head of Marshall Field's Sporting Goods Section; Ed Meredith, Publisher of "House and Garden"; Bruce Allen of Allen Manufacturing, and others chartered a DC-3 to take them to California, where they were to join approximately 300 fellow members of Los Ranchos Visitadores (visiting ranchers) and make the historic horseback trek across some of the most beautiful territory in the United States. Active members include Jerry Colona, Walt Disney, John Boles and Lewis Stone. As the DC-3 was going over the mountains, William Cline flew the controls for a while under the watchful eye of the pilot. The pilot asked why he was climbing to 11,000 feet. The answer was, in order to clear the peaks. The pilot said, "I think you will, the peaks are only 6,000 feet."

In California they mounted many of the finest horses in the world: White Arabias, Palominos, Tennessee Walking Horses, and accompanied by stage coaches, chuck and pack wagons began their ride May 5 at Santa Ynez Valley. Horsemen and horses were bedecked in finest Western Regalia. The saddle of Justin Dart, head of Rexall Drugs, was worth $15,000. The climax of the traditional "Ranchers Spring Ride" is Zaca Lake set like a blue jewel high in the mountains. Mr. Cline's expression, the sparkle of his eyes as he recounted the trip, told of its wonders more than any words. And surely this ride enriches America with colorful custom, beautiful tradition.

Checkpoints: Many private pilots are not really clear on what insurance they should carry. Mr. Cline invites all pilots to write him for complete information, free of obligation. That's at Conklin, Price and Webb, 175 W. Jackson, Chicago. D. B. Becker, a Lt. Col. with the Marines Air Force is head of their Aviation Dept. The new Chicago Rockets Football Team will make all their games by air. The league reaches from Miami to Los Angeles and the wide range would be impossible without plane travel. There are now more than 50 different designs of jet airplanes! All flying or ready to fly! Two CAP local airshows, one at Prosperi Field and one at Rubinkam are scheduled for August and September. These are in addition to the big AAF-CAP airshow.

Chicago and Northern Illinois— "A Department Store" for Industry

"I make electrical relays and switches here in Chicago. My plant is small. A prospective customer recently called on me to place a substantial order. When he went through my factory he stated quite frankly he doubted my ability to produce the order. I asked him to reserve judgment and took him for a little excursion around the city. Within a few hours we visited my tool and die maker, a screw machine shop, three plating and finishing firms (each a specialist in a different type of finishing), a metal fabricator and other suppliers. "You're not a small outfit, mister," he concluded. "You're in mass production with departments for every process at your finger tips." He placed his order and I agreed to start delivery in 30 days... was actually shipping in three weeks. In today's market I find this diversity of facilities most helpful. To me, Chicago and Northern Illinois is a practical 'department store' of industry."

*Name on request.

This true story typifies the war-time operations of thousands of Chicago manufacturers who could not hope to provide for every manufacturing process within their own walls. It helps to explain why this area became the nation's subcontracting center, producing by the war's end 23% of the nation's electrical machinery, for example, and 40% of the electronic equipment.

Utilizing cost-saving techniques, many small manufacturers in Chicago and Northern Illinois are today in mass production, despite limitations of inside facilities and capital investment. They have learned how to produce and make delivery from this industrial area easily, quickly, economically—and in large quantity.

Our staff of trained industrial engineers is prepared to answer any inquiries about the many economic resources of this area. On request they will make a special detailed study, for your business, of the various factors which make Chicago and Northern Illinois such a strategic industrial location. This work is carried on without charge. All inquiries are handled confidentially and promptly.

Industries locating in this area have these outstanding advantages: Railroad Center of the United States • World Airport • Inland Waterways • Geographical Center of U. S. Population • Great Financial Center • The "Great Central Market" • Food Producing and Processing Center • Leader in Iron and Steel Manufacturing • Good Labor Relations Record • 2,500,000 Kilowatts of Power • Tremendous Coal Reserves • Good Government • Good Living

Send for free booklets containing useful information on these advantages.

WHAT DID "A" BOMB DO? . . . Standing under the wing of a damaged float plane with a light bomb still in its rack unexploded (directly over the officer's heads), Rear Adm. Ralph Ofstie, member of the joint chiefs of staff evaluation board (left), and Rear Adm. BIG BUSINESS AND TAXES

WASHINGTON.—Juciest gravy in the current tax legislation is the continuance of the carry-back of unused excess profits credit. The senate finance committee, always friendly to big business, not only knocked out the excess profits tax last year, but retained carry-back refunds. This permits corporations whose current earnings do not proportionately match their 1936-1939 earnings, to claim adjustments in their 1946 tax payments.

This is one reason some firms didn't worry too much about prolonged strikes. General Motors alone will probably hit the treasury for a refund of 80 million dollars. To head off this drain on the treasury, Rep. Cleveland Bailey of Clarksburg, W. Va., Democrat, introduced a bill last January to repeal the carry-back provisions. On January 23, the house ways and means committee asked the treasury for a report.

Recently impatient Rep. Wilbur Mills of Arkansas, Democrat, proposed that congress act independently, without waiting for the treasury report. He pointed out that large credits can be claimed by corporations which actually make more money this year than they did in any of the years from 1936 to 1939, simply because their capital investment is now larger.

Mills charged that many large corporations are taking advantage of this loophole, and as a result the taxpayer foots the bill for the expansion of private industries. He also listed a long series of "abuses and transactions which will no doubt be resorted to in order to create carry-back refunds or tax credits."

KANSAS ATOMIC STRAW

The Eastman Kodak company has been having trouble as a result of the first atomic bomb test in New Mexico—one year ago. Eastman found that, for some mysterious reason, some of its film was turning black before exposure. Finally experts discovered that the film had been packed in straw which came from western Kansas.

After the Los Alamos bomb test, radioactive dust from New Mexico settled on Kansas wheat fields, and is still so powerful that the Kodak company has had to stop using Kansas straw for packing film.

TRUMAN WRITES A VETO

President Truman was convinced that the half-breed price-control bill would not work. The Taft amendment, he especially argued, was absolutely impossible, and he cited accountancy experts of various big manufacturing firms, all of them against OPA, who branded the Taft cost-plus formula as likely to bring chaos to industry.

"I just have to put what I consider the country's welfare first," the President told his congressional leaders. "Let's not fool the country and give them something that won't work."

When they told him that they would not be able to persuade their reluctant colleagues to pass any sort of price-control bill, the President replied:

"If it's this or nothing, then we'll just have to take nothing."

Among other things, the President figured that during the chaotic period sure to follow if the polyglot price-control bill were passed, congress would claim it was his fault for not making the bill work, when, in actual fact, the bill was unworkable. He felt also that if congress did dare to go home without a price-control bill, things would be hotter for them in their districts than in Washington. He also warned that in this case he would call a special session of congress.

WHO WON THE WAR?

It is now getting close to a year since the end of the war with Japan, and yet the strategic bombing survey for Japan has not been made public. Inside reason is a vigorous backstage tug-of-war between the army and navy which boils down to the basic question: "Which of them won the war in the Pacific?"

Civilian members of the survey staff, however, summarize the situation:

1. Heaviest damage to Japan was inflicted by U. S. submarines. They had just about shut off all Jap supplies toward the end of the war and Japan was paralyzed.
2. Next greatest damage was done by long-range army land-based planes.
3. The navy's carrier-based planes were important, but ranked second to the B-29s.

DIPLOMATIC POUCH

It's only been a short time since the war, but two former enemies, Italy and Austria, now earnestly seeking to become democracies, will be proposed by the United States for admission to the United Nations next September. Truman o.k'd this move last week. . . . Prime Minister De Valera has decided not to apply for Irish membership in the United Nations. . . . The pro-Soviet Mongolian peoples' republic, however, thinks otherwise about the United Nations.

Idle Acreage No Longer Recommended

Cultivation Needed For Tired Acres

The "rest cure" treatment for worn-out farm land is rapidly becoming a thing of the past, as farmers are learning that "acres on vacation" are likely to deteriorate rather than increase in fertility level, according to J. C. Hackleman, professor of crops extension at the University of Illinois college of agriculture.

"Farmers formerly thought that if they put their 'tired acres' into pasture, the land could be rested two or three years and would come back as productive and vigorous as ever," Professor Hackleman pointed out.

"The fact is that every ton of beef, pork or mutton or milk produced on these pastures removes nitrogen, phosphorus, potash and calcium or lime just as surely as does a crop of corn, oats, wheat or hay."

"In addition, as the permanent pastures become less productive they provide less cover and the result is more loss through erosion."

But these weary pastures are not hopeless cases, Professor Hackleman declares. The response of most of them to proper soil treatment is almost miraculous.

A 5-10-5 fertilizer contains 20 per cent of actual available plant food. The first figure in the fertilizer analysis indicates the percentage of nitrogen (N), the second phosphoric acid (P. O.) and the third available potash (K.).

Five simple steps, he says, will transform the average worn out pasture into a productive acreage in one or, at most, two years. These steps are to test the soil and treat it with the necessary plant food mineral elements, disc these minerals thoroughly while preparing a reasonably good seedbed, reseed with a mixture of legumes and grasses, control grazing for at least a year and clip weeds, giving the legumes and grasses a chance.

Professor Hackleman said that because of an increase of cultivated acreages during the war, a greater acreage is now ready for legumes than in prewar days.

Orchard grass and ladino clover has been proven an effective pasture for range turkeys and chickens. Tests at regional laboratory, Pennsylvania, have shown that the number of birds to be pastured can be doubled by proper stand and management.

Drying Agents Little

Use to Uncured Hay

Preparations containing sodium bicarbonate, drying agents or mixtures of the two, offer little promise as a practical solution of problems involved in the storage of undecured hay, recent studies at Massachusetts state college reveal. The tests showed that prohibitive quantities would be necessary for effectiveness on stored moist hay. Other drying chemicals also have proven prohibitively high.

TREASURE OF THE SEA

By George E. Walsh

W.N.U. Release

CHAPTER I.

Such a small thing as a shrimp may save a man's life by putting new heart into him at a time when his digestive organs have ceased to function for lack of fuel. If the will to live or die is dependent upon a bunch of nerve cells and ganglions, the proper activity of the latter is contingent upon the regular carbonization of commonplace foods.

Dick Jordan had reached the point of semi-starvation and physical exhaustion when lethal forgetfulness seemed the greatest boon to man—to drift off peacefully into a world of dreams and fancies that ends in death. He didn't want to live; he had lost the will to go on and suffer; he craved surcease from the torture of wind and sun and waves—and from thirst and hunger!

Clinging to his frail support that had been the toy of the waves for days and nights—he scarcely knew how many—he raised his head for one last look around his narrow undulating horizon before releasing his hold to slip down into the green waters clamoring to receive him. It was the last despairing look of a dying man when the faculties flare up an instant, in full intelligence, before the final collapse.

Then, coming on the crest of a wave, sliding down its slope to meet him, a small island of seaweed thrust its tentacles of air-bladders and greenish fronds about his neck and shoulders, rustling and murmuring against the sides of his raft.

Aroused an instant by this unexpected break in the monotony of his horizon the castaway stared at it in stupefied wonder. It was alive with crustaceans and molluscs, those tiny forms of life that cling to algae and make their homes in their branches—squids, snails, slugs, barnacles and anthropods.

A tiny crab floated on the surface. Dick made a grab for it, but missed it. His splash startled from their hiding place a school of shrimp. Catching one of these, he decapitated it and ate it raw. The taste awakened dormant impulses in him. He began fishing warily for the tiny creatures, driving them into the open with one hand and cupping them into a dense mass of seaweed, he would fling them on his float with the algae and scramble for them before they could leap back into the sea.

It became an exciting game, with real food as the prize. Every time he caught one and swallowed it, his appetite craved more, and his fagged brain power rallied to his assistance, giving him the necessary mental alertness and skill for the work.

A Handful of Shrimp Revives Will to Live

It saved his life—the shrimp and the game! By the time he had scavenged the mass of seaweed, robbing it of every form of life that could be called food, his mind was clearer through the functioning of his digestive organs, and the will to live and fight it out flared up again.

But the handful of raw shrimps had, after all, been a mere morsel to a starving man, and the salt of them, which had tasted good at first, was beginning to intensify his thirst. He had been fortunate in securing rain water for the first three days, but the last of it was gone, and the agony of thirst was beginning to add to the tortures of an empty stomach.

"If there was a sail now—" he began, and then stopped. Insanity lay in that direction. He had looked for a sail so long that his eyes were sore and unsteady; he had prayed for it until in a frenzy of disappointment he had anathematized all prayer as silly and misleading; he had hoped and longed for the sight of a ship until he had seen them in his dreams—a dozen of them—sailing around and around him, mocking him, tantalizing him even in his waking moments. There had been strange illusions, mirages of ships and argosies, pictures of islands and headlands, of towns and cities, of people walking their streets. They had come and gone until the befuddled brain was at odds with itself.

"There isn't any sail!" he muttered aloud, closing his teeth. "There are dream sails, mirages of them, but nothing real. They disappeared from the ocean ages ago. I know, for I saw the last of them."

He had glimpsed a sail—a real sail—when he thrust his head upward after his meal of shrimp; but he wouldn't believe it—wanted to believe it—but wouldn't.

"It's only in my eye," he added. "I'd get cross-eyed if I tried to look at all the ships I've seen since—since that night."

That night was forever indelibly impressing itself upon his mind—a nightmare of horror! The steamer had struck in the middle of the night, and out of the staterooms had streamed an endless array of strange forms—white-faced women, frightened children and nurses, grim-lipped men, and weak-kneed passengers of both sexes who needed help to get them in the small boats.

Dick himself had helped women and children into the first boats, winning smiles of trust from the latter and glances of frightened approval from the former. There had been a few others of the passengers who actively arrayed themselves alongside the officers to maintain order and system.

One of them was Pettigrew—Hen Pettigrew—whose whole life and training made him immune to fear and excitement. Hen had distinguished himself in that melee, as he always did, and won the approval of the captain.

Early in the confusion they had separated—Hen Pettigrew and Dick Jordan—for the exigency of the moment severed all conventional bonds. Dick had been allowed to go his own way, free as any other passenger; but he knew, or felt, that the other's eyes were on him, watching that he didn't slip into one of the boats filled mostly with women and children. He had an unpleasant sensation that he was still being watched as a criminal. The vigilance of the law never relaxed—not even in the panic of a shipwreck.

"No, not in the same boat," came the unexpected reply.

When all but two of the boats had been cast off, and the sea was full of them, bobbing around like cockle-shells, he and Hen had come face to face—the only two passengers left aboard. Hen had looked at him, and nodded pleasantly.

"You've done well, Jordan," were his words. "Which boat do you want to go in?"

Dick was surprised into stammering by the question. Until then there had been no choice. He still considered himself Pettigrew's man; he had not thought of making a break for liberty. Ever since he had left the South American port in Hen's custody he had been a model prisoner, and it seemed slightly dishonorable to take advantage of the disaster to escape.

"Why, the one you choose for me," he answered. "It makes no difference. Is there room for both of us?"

"No, not in the same boat," came the unexpected reply. "That's why I'm giving you a choice. You deserve it—after this."

He waved his hand around to indicate his meaning.

Pettigrew Wishes Dick Good Luck in Future

Jordan was more astonished than ever. Pettigrew was eyeing him as a man, and not as an officer of the law; he even placed a hand familiarly on one shoulder.

"We're just man to man now, Jordan," he added. "We're not going to leave this ship together—can't, you know—captain's orders. You go your way, and I go mine. If we meet again—on shore—I'll pinch you. It's my duty. But just now we're—Well," laughing quietly, "friends, I guess. I don't mind calling you that. I wish you good luck! If you reach shore and I don't I wish—wish—"

Dick never knew what he intended to wish, for at that moment the harsh, grating voice of the first mate interrupted, and Jordan tumbled into one boat and Hen Pettigrew into another.

Almost instantly they were separated in the blackness of the night. Dick was free, in truth, then—not on probation. He had the whole world to roam so long as he didn't run afoul of Hen Pettigrew. As they drifted through the darkness of the night, he smiled broadly, while the others sat and moaned or spoke in awed, frightened voices. Would they ever reach land? How far were they from the nearest shore? That was the burden of their conversation.

At first an effort was made to keep the boats together, but this was soon abandoned by the seamen. There was always the danger of collision in a rough sea.

In a couple of hours each boatload was a separate unit, dependent upon the skill and exertion of its own crew for safety, with no knowledge of what was happening to the others. The black pall of night descended upon them, obliterating the rest of the world, and circumscribing for them an existence bounded by the gunwales of the boat. In this narrow space they huddled, awed and terrified as much by the sense of isolation as by the roar of wind and waves.

Jordan was not greatly surprised when the accident he had been anticipating came; it seemed the inevitable climax to their adventure, and unavoidable. A giant wave lifted them clear out of the water and upset the frail craft, rolling it over and over before allowing it to descend into the trough to be trampled upon by the mountain of surging green brine.

After that it was every man for himself. There was no further opportunity for team work or mutual co-operation. Dick Jordan found himself clinging to a few boards that had been in the bottom of the boat. It made an excellent raft for one, but hardly of use for two. In his eagerness to take full possession of it, a fat man climbed upon it, overreaching himself by his greediness.

The slender raft sunk out of sight, and when it finally came to the surface again the fat man was gone. Jordan retrieved it; clung to it; clutched it with both hands, refusing to yield his hold even when the waves rolled it over and over and buried him fathoms deep in the sea.

He had been three days on the raft before the will to live had finally cracked, and then, fortified by the raw food washed up to him by the mass of drifting seaweed, revived, and once more struggled to reassert itself over exhausted, tortured flesh.

It was a real sail that his red-rimmed eyes saw this time, but he refused to believe it for a long time, laughing at his own inconsistency in hoping and praying that it was not an optical illusion, and declaring in the same breath it could not be anything else. It was not only a real sail that he saw, but it was coming in his direction, bearing down upon him at a speed that quickly dispelled all doubts.

Two-Masted Lugger Hoves in Sight

As the boat drew nearer, Dick made out its nondescript character from its sails. A two-masted lugger, quite common in the Caribbean for fishing and coasting, with lumpy hull and mildewed canvas, spotted like the coat of a leopard, it slopped along in the rough seas as if unwillingly propelled by a power that it could not resist.

Long before any one aboard sighted Dick Jordan, he had studied the craft from stem to keel with greedy, anxious eyes, taking in everything from the clumsily bent top-sails to the ill-fitting jib that was forever shifting in the wind.

"Fishermen," he concluded, speaking his thoughts aloud. "I can't be far from land."

A moment later, when the lugger acted as if about to change her course, he raised his free hand and shouted with all the strength he could muster. Even at that distance, it seemed almost miraculous that they heard or saw him; but keen eyes had been scanning the sea closely, looking for just such derelicts. It was their business to pick up flotsam and jetsam of the ocean on the chance of finding a prize.

His cry brought several black faces to the port rail, and Jordan's former conclusion that the lugger was a native fishing craft seemed confirmed by the appearance of the crew. They were swarthy Caribs, an ancient type weakened and diluted by the blood of pure Negroes. A burly half-breed, with the white part of him showing in his straight hair and mottled complexion, seemed to be in command, for the order came from him to heave the lugger up in the wind and lower a boat.

Twenty minutes later Dick sat on the dirty, ill-smelling deck of the vessel, greedily eating and drinking food and liquid that under ordinary circumstances would have repelled him; but nature's cravings had to be satisfied, and it was no time to be critical. The crew formed a half circle around him, with Captain Tucu, the half-breed skipper, and Black Burley, the lugger's mate, in the immediate foreground. They were inspecting him with something more than curiosity—with greed and avariciousness, Dick thought, but he could not exactly translate it in words.

Captain Tucu had an evil, sinister face that in repose was hard and sullen, as if the white blood in him was silently protesting the injustice of the trick played in mingling negro with it; in action it lighted up with a fierceness of either joy or anger that had an element of the fanatic's.

JESUS AND TRUE WORSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Deuteronomy 8:11-14, 18-20; Isaiah 40:30, 31; Mark 12:28-34.
MEMORY SELECTION—God is a Spirit; and that they worship him must worship in spirit and truth.—John 4:24.

The one true God is worthy of the wholehearted worship of all men. The second commandment, which we studied last week, forbids all and every idolatry and thus requires exclusive worship of God.

It really means something in the life of a man to worship God in sincerity and truth. It makes life worthwhile both here and hereafter.

I. Worship Balances Life (Deut. 8:11-14).

Prosperity is usually thought to be a blessing. We fear depression and poverty. The Lord through Moses warned his people that prosperity was dangerous. It still is, because material things have the power to so satisfy the natural desires of man as to make him forget his spiritual needs.

Is it not true that material prosperity usually brings with it a corresponding decrease in spirituality. Life values are weighed in gold, silver, wheat and iron instead of being viewed in the light of God's Word.

Worship of God will balance life for it will keep man from forgetting God and his laws. In the wilderness Israel had to call on God for daily bread. Now that they were to come into the promised land they would be apt to think they produced their own food.

II. Worship Protects Life (Deut. 8:18-20).

One of the most mischievous mistakes of life is the idea that man is the maker of his own money. Only God can give man the power of hand and heart, of muscle and mind, which brings forth wealth, and then he can only draw it out of God's resources in mine or field or sea.

This fallacy of man leads him astray, and he begins to worship the very powers he uses and finds pleasure in the gods of this world. That way leads only to eternal destruction, to spiritual death.

How is man to be delivered from this awful destructive force? By a right relationship to God, by worship of God and devotion to the Lord.

Israel had a covenant with God, and in the keeping of it they would find deliverance from all which would pull down and destroy—yes, and from the judgment of God (v. 20).

We who are believers in Christ are under the new covenant of grace. If we have been born again we have the promise of God that we have eternal life. But let us be clear that it is possible for a Christian to so forget God and his covenant with the Lord as to lose his fellowship and joy, and to be useless and fruitless.

III. Worship Strengthens Life (Isa. 40:30, 31).

The Christian life is not an easy one to live. After all, who wants it easy? There is, however, full provision by God for the power needed to live a life as victorious and exultant as that of the soaring eagle. That power is for those who "wait upon the Lord" (v. 31).

It is taken for granted that those who are old may become weary and faint, but the fact is that even the youth have this disappointing experience.

We, leaders in the church and parents, are apt to forget that youth is often a time of great struggle. The young man or woman must make the choices of purposes and ideals which will determine their future. Too often youth, left unguided and without the balance of a real faith in God, makes the wrong choices and winds up in bitter disappointment.

Only God is sufficient for the need of our young people but he is sufficient. Let us teach our boys and girls to wait on the Lord.

IV. Worship Completes Life (Mark 12:28-34).

Here was a man, who, by the testimony of Jesus was "not far from the kingdom of God." He was very near to a full devotion to God in Christ. He knew "all the answers," but he did not follow the teaching which he knew to its proper and blessed conclusion.

It is terrifying to think how close a man can come to entering into eternal life, and yet miss it altogether. It prompts the writer of these notes to ask you, the reader, very earnestly. Have you entered into eternal life through Jesus Christ? "Almost" will not avail; you can be almost saved—and eternally lost.

The true nature of worship is revealed in this lesson as a loving dependence on God at all times and in all circumstances. We recognize him as the one who can supply our every need, spiritual and temporal. We accord to him quick and full obedience. We find in him such complete satisfaction that we cannot withhold our love and his love from our fellow men. We worship him!

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Training Practices

In a recent directive Veterans administration has notified co-operating institutions that it will not interfere with existing practices in recognized schools and training-on-the-job establishments in which veterans are enrolled under educational features of the G.I. Bill.

VA also announced that job training establishments do not have to guarantee veterans work at the end of their training courses regardless of circumstances. Schools and training establishments are required only to submit their usual reports on student attendance and grades of veterans who are enrolled, and VA training officers will obtain their information only if the schools are unable to furnish regular reports.

This directive was issued after some schools expressed the belief that VA training officers might seek to exercise supervision over established schools that have had training courses for years.

"No employer is expected to guarantee a job to a veteran who fails to demonstrate during the course that he will merit employment. Neither is an employer-trainer expected to guarantee a position against unforeseeable circumstances which may arise and make it necessary for him to reduce his force or at least not to expand it," the directive says.

Questions and Answers

Q. Can you explain to me the difference between allotments made by men in the services and family allowances?—Mrs. A. R. B., Bedford, Ind.

A. Any man in the armed services may make an allotment for several purposes (1) for his National Service life insurance, (2) for purchase of war bonds, (3) for his bank account or even for his family, and these allotments are deducted from his pay. However, when a service man makes what is called a class F allotment of $22 per month to be paid his dependents, which is also called an allotment and is deducted from his pay, the government adds $28 for his wife and $30 for the first child and $20 for each additional child. These are called family allowances. Allotments on the part of servicemen are not compulsory although the army urges such allotments be made. However, a wife or a dependent child may request an allotment and if the request is granted, it is compulsory on the part of the serviceman to make the allotment. Only wives and children may request allotments, parents or other members of the family may not.

Q. My husband was in the navy 30 months and he is entitled to mustering out pay and other G.I. Bill benefits. Would his wife and children be entitled to get any of it for their support?—Mrs. E. L. J., Guntersville, Ala.

A. Not that I know of. Mustering out pay is given directly to the veteran and so are other payments under the G.I. Bill. Yours is a civil case and you have all the protection of the law for desertion and non-support.

Q. Is there any way a veteran can get paid for the days he loses work on account of disease he caught in the Pacific which causes his hands to break out in water blisters?—Mrs. J. B. D., Chase, Md.

A. There is no way unless he applies for a disability pension. It appears that if his disease was service connected he is eligible to apply for a disability rating and receive medical treatment. Go to your nearest office of the Veterans administration.

Q. Could you please inform me as to whether some agency of our government publishes a mailing list of men in a certain division of the army? If so how could I secure a list of men in the 82nd and 101st Airborne Divisions?—G. R. H., Bolivar, N. Y.

A. Of course the adjutant general's office has lists of men in every division. However, I know of no agency which publishes the lists for obvious reasons, since they could be used for commercial purposes.

Q. I served nine months overseas and was honorably discharged. When I was discharged the war was still on and I was not permitted to bring any souvenirs back home during the war. Will the war department give me an army rifle for a souvenir?—C. J. J., Red Springs, N. C.

A. No.

Q. Can you tell me how I can get my husband a dependency discharge?—Mrs. W. C., Clinton, N. C.

A. Such discharges must be initiated by the man in service by application to his commanding officer.
